She explained that she had no control over what he would do and that she merely told the lawyer that she would not do what her husband wanted her to do. The comment that she would not have an "income" was based on the assumption that her husband would have prevented her from working 13 The rule provides: An attorney's communication with a party he represents during the course of an action in which he is engaged, such as: (1) giving or withholding consent to settle, (2) prosecuting and defending a suit; (3) rendering professional services; or (4) otherwise attempting, within the bounds of professional propriety, to secure for his client advantage over other parties involved. (c) Representation of Adverse Interest. Where a lawyer represents two or more clients who are not presently involved in the same suit and, through inadvertence or otherwise, represents a client whose interests are adverse to those of one or more of the other clients, he is bound to ensure that the representation remains loyal to that client. 5 A.R.S. Sec. 12-504(A) 14 Former A.R.S. Sec. 12-401(3) provided: A. An attorney shall not enter into a business transaction with a client; nor shall he enter into a partnership or employment relationship with a client; nor shall he accept compensation for his services from a client, except that he may charge a client for expenses and a reasonable fee, for his services in expediting the matter, in the nature of a holding charge, and for services in the prosecution or defense
